Announcing SEHTA as a Media Partner at The Digital Health Technology Show & The Wearable Technology Show 2018

SEHTA is proud to announce that we are now Media Partners for both co-located events The Digital Health Technology Show & The Wearable Technology Show taking place on 13 – 14 March 2018 at Excel, London.

Medical innovation will take centre stage for 2018, the largest wearables and disruptive health technology event in the world, with never before-seen devices and applications and a raft of industry-leading speakers.

The 2018 Conference programme boasts three tracks, with over 100 hours of content programmed.

Attendees can choose to attend talks on the Digital Health Disrupt Stage – covering global innovation in healthcare, the Leadership Theatre – where senior healthcare figures in the UK will discuss and debate the challenges ahead, or the Patient Impact Stage – delivering insights into how technology is being used in the real world. There will also be demonstrations of the latest medical innovations on the Innovation Stage, which will also host a start-up competition: The Health Innovation Award.

Over 200 speakers will be involved. Already confirmed are some of the leading innovators and thought leaders in healthcare, including Gerry Bolger, CNIO, Imperial College Trust, Nick Venters, CCIO and Consultant Psychiatrist, Dr Lawrence Petalidis, Head of Innovation at Chelsea and Westminster, and Dr Jason McKeown, whose company have just raised over £1 million for a revolutionary new device.

On the expo floor, visitors will be able to visit over 50 companies showcasing the next generation of digital healthcare devices. Leading technology companies Bittium, Firstbeat, Modius, Ultramed and others are already confirmed to take part, as well as the NHS.
